An Antidote to "I'm Bored!" for the Holidays

[SAVANNAH] Instead of saying, "I'm bored!" imaginative youngsters may choose a new creative outlet for the long December holidays – cooking with the chefs at the Hamilton-Turner Inn mansion in Savannah.

On December 20 through December 23, the Inn's chefs are inviting children age 6 and old to experience elementary cooking, like baking creative cookies and making simple, yet imaginative, hors d'oeuvres. For overnight guests, the little chef's adventure is complimentary, along with a round of golf for parents or grandparents.

"We want to contribute something to the welcoming entertainment of children and families in Savannah. Our goal is to stimulate creativity and appreciation for fun, cultured environments," shares owner Janes Sales. "Some families will be traveling over the holidays with young children. The Inn is a magical wonderland with over-the-top holiday décor. We thought the children may enjoy a novel experience with our chefs during their stay at the Inn."

Local area children (age 6 and older) may reserve one of the limited little chef cooking opportunities still available for December 22. Renowned artist and author, Sharon Sasseen will be reading to the children during 3:00 p.m. hors d'oeuvres on December 22. Contact the Inn for details and reservations – toll free 888-448-8849 or local 912-233-1833.

About the Hamilton-Turner Inn.

The architecturally notable mansion (ca. 1873) of post-Civil War businessman extraordinaire and former naval officer, Samuel Pugh Hamilton, maintains a high society status and is "historically the talk of the town" (sm). Notoriously known as the party mansion of John Berendt's colossal best selling novel "Midnight in the Garden of Good and Evil," today the 19th century Mid Victorian gentleman's manor reflects meticulous renovations and affluent furnishings as a family-friendly, luxury bed and breakfast inn in historic Savannah Georgia.

The park mansion's Second French Empire architectural craftsmanship permeates 17 guestroom and suite accommodations, formal parlors and carriage house. Peaceful butterfly gardens, culinary trained chefs, and fashionable dining – personalized breakfast and evening hors d'oeuvres – are included in a larger-than-life style of leisure. The invitation to 'arrive for quiet comfort and inviting pleasures' is extended to the discerning traveler, destination wedding, honeymoon couple, journalist, dignitary; and, more uniquely, to upscale lodging to families with young children, and guests requiring wheelchair accommodation. With a coveted park side setting in the quiet dignity of Lafayette Square, Hamilton-Turner Inn is the refined answer to "Where to stay in Savannah." www.Hamilton-TurnerInn.com.
